

In this day and age of technological innovation, access to information is increasingly becoming vital for individuals to understand the world around them and make conscious decisions based upon the information that they have. Unfortunately, with the exorbitant prices charged by cable and Television broadcast companies it is increasingly creating a bigger and bigger gap between the haves and the have nots. With community wireless, it allows people who cannot afford access to be able to get it.

It is very important that we as a society, which bases our democracy on the idea of the "American Dream", provide all citizens with the tools needed to take a step up in the world. When access to information is limited and extremely expensive it excludes many individuals who should have access.

Please do not bow to the will of big corporations who already control a broad range of the spectrum and whose profits are so enormous that there is no reasonable explanation for why they need more power.
